Collaborations Centers

A collaboration center is a central location for sharing ideas, notes, and questions. You can communicate with peer groups through public and private discussion forums, post an article, or ask a question to initiate a discussion on a specific topic. You can also respond to articles posted by others.

A collaboration center can be specific to a particular subject category. Any learning activity can be assigned a collaboration center.

Administrators manage the expert community. Some people may be designated as experts for a particular course or subject area. Once an expert is specified, the users can direct questions to the expert. Experts can maintain their own profile with information about their availability and expertise. Users can rate the quality of answers received from experts.

Below summarizes the collaboration centers features:

Forums

- Post an article
- Respond to a posted article
- Receive a message when a thread changes
- View questions you asked
- Delete a message thread

Experts

- Assigning an expert to a collaboration center
- Editing your expert profile
- Asking an expert a question
- Answering a question asked of you
- Rating the expert response
- Forwarding a question to another expert
- Removing an expert from the collaboration center
